

States suffer power cuts as coal stocks shrink

SUDARSHAN VARADHAN
Chennai, October 8

NORTH INDIAN STATES have suffered electricity cuts and face further outages because of a lack of coal, an analysis of government data and interviews with residents found, contradicting government assurances there is enough power.

The shortages in India — the world's largest coal consumer after China — follow widespread outages in neighbouring China, which has shut factories and schools to manage the crisis.

Over half of the 135 coal-fired power plants, which in total supply around 70% of the country's electricity, have fuel stocks of less than three days, data from the federal grid operator showed.

The power ministry did not immediately respond to a request for comment. On Wednesday, The Indian Express quoted power minister RK Singh as saying: "There is nowhere that we have not been able to supply the quantity of power demanded."

Reuters analysis of daily load despatch data from federal grid regulator POSOCO showed the power supply deficit in the first seven days of October were amounted to 11.2% of the country's total shortages throughout the year.

The data is publicly available but the analysis provides a first concrete indication of the extent of the problem. Energy supplies are under strain globally as prices surge and demand and supply chains are strained by the recovery of consumption following lockdowns to contain the pandemic.

The power shortfall in the first seven days of October was over 21 times the deficit in the same period last year, and more than four times of that in 2019. Supply shortages over the last two years have largely been restricted to the strife-torn region of Jammu and Kashmir.

"For the last several days, we haven't had power for seven-eight hours a day," Prashant Raj, an electronic store manager in the Madhubani district of Bihar told Reuters.

The eastern states of Jharkhand and Bihar, and north western Rajasthan were among the worst-affected, an analysis of daily load despatch data from federal grid regulator POSOCO showed. Jharkhand recorded a power deficit of 18%-24%, while power supply to Bihar and Rajasthan was between 6% and 17% below requirements, the POSOCO data revealed.
